

Issue Brief: The Health Benefit Exchange and the Small Employer Market

Overview

The federal health care reform law directs states to set up health insurance marketplaces, called “Health Benefit Exchanges,” that will enable individuals, families and employers to purchase health insurance from a range of commercial insurers offering a variety of health plans. Starting in 2014, the Exchange will serve as a central point of access for health insurance, providing eligible individuals, families and small employers with the ability to select from a number of “qualified health plans” offered by a range of insurers. The plans available through the Exchange will have varying amounts of cost sharing and monthly premiums.

Lower- and middle-income individuals and families with income up to four times the Federal Poverty Level (FPL) – which for a family of four is $89,400 in calendar year 2011 – may be eligible for subsidized health insurance (i.e., premium tax credits and reduced out-of-pocket costs) through the American Health Benefit Exchange. Small employers will be able to purchase health coverage through the Small Business Health Options Program or “SHOP” Exchange.

During its first two years of operation, firms with 50 or fewer full-time workers will be eligible to purchase coverage through the SHOP Exchange. In January 2016, employers with up to 100 workers will be allowed to buy health insurance through the SHOP Exchange, although the State does have the option to expand the definition of small group to include employers with up to 100 employees prior to the January 2016 federal requirement. In 2017, the State may choose to allow large employers (i.e., businesses with over 100 full-time employees) to purchase coverage through the Exchange.

Small employers with 25 or fewer lower-wage workers may be eligible for premium subsidies for up to two years if they purchase coverage through the Exchange. However, in general, employees that purchase coverage through the SHOP Exchange will not be eligible for premium tax credits and reduced cost-sharing, unless the employees’ share of the premium for employer-sponsored coverage exceeds 9.5 percent of the employees’ income.

While the law sets out certain requirements, Delaware will need to make a number of key decisions in setting up its SHOP Exchange. This issue brief discusses the key issues and policy decisions associated with the Exchange and the small group market.

One Exchange or Two?

The law allows states to establish two separate Exchanges – a SHOP Exchange for employers and an American Health Benefit Exchange for individuals and families – or a single Exchange to serve the individual and small group markets. It is important to point out that the decision to administer a single Exchange that serves both markets does not necessarily mean that the individual and small group markets need be, or should be, combined for risk pooling purposes. That is, Delaware may choose to designate a single administrative entity to operate the Exchange for both individuals and employers, while still maintaining separate risk pools for the individual and small group markets.

Many of the requirements of the SHOP Exchange will be identical or similar to those of the individual market Exchange; including, but not limited to, the health plans offered, the summary of benefits information provided to consumers, the rating of health plans based on quality and price, and the health plan reporting requirements.

Both the SHOP and individual Exchange may only offer “qualified health plans” within specific benefit levels: Platinum, Gold, Silver, and Bronze. The benefit levels will vary based on “actuarial value,” which is a summary measure of the amount of medical claims paid by the health plan (excluding a member’s point-of-service cost sharing), expressed as a percentage of the total medical claims incurred for a standard population.

Premiums <hr style="width: 50%; margin: 0 auto;"/>	=	Actuarial Value Expected Claims

Platinum plans will cover 90 percent of the cost of care, which means an individual purchasing a Platinum plan can expect to have 90 percent of his/her medical costs covered by the premium, with the remaining ten percent paid through point-of-service cost sharing (i.e., co-payments, co-insurance, deductibles). Gold plans will cover 80 percent; Silver plans will cover 70 percent; and Bronze plans will cover 60 percent.

The individual market Exchange may also offer a high deductible health plan to certain individuals (i.e., under age 30 or people who are exempt from the individual mandate based on affordability of coverage). These plans will not be offered to employers purchasing insurance through the SHOP Exchange.

In addition, the law limits the maximum upfront deductible for health plans purchased by small employers. In 2014, small group health plans may not have an upfront deductible that exceeds $2,000 for single coverage and $4,000 for family coverage.¹ These limits do not apply to the individual market, although the actuarial value standards noted above will effectively cap the amount of upfront deductible that may apply to individual coverage sold through the Exchange.

All plans sold through the Exchange must cover “essential health benefits.” The health reform law outlines a basic definition of essential health benefits and requires the U.S. Secretary of ¹ See Appendix for overview of small group market regulations that will take effect in January 2014.

Health and Human Services (HHS) to further define what constitutes essential health benefits. In making this determination, the HHS Secretary must ensure the coverage is equal to the typical coverage provided by an employer, as well as other principles described in the federal law.

The law also requires that health plans in both the individual and group markets comply with a common set of rules, including:

- Guaranteed issue and guaranteed renewal (i.e., an applicant cannot be denied coverage and cannot be dropped at the time of renewal);
- No use of health status as a rating factor (i.e., a person or group cannot be charged a higher premium based on his/her health status or a pre-existing condition);
- A limited set of factors may be used to set premiums (e.g., age, geographic location, family composition); and,
- Rates may not vary by more than 3:1 based on age (e.g., the rate charged an older applicant can be no more than three times the rate charged the youngest applicant).

While health plans sold in the individual and small group Exchange will have common rating requirements; unless the risk pools are combined, the premiums for coverage will likely differ between these two markets. That is, a health plan offered in the individual market may have a different premium than an identical plan offered in the small group market.

Health Plan Selection by Employers and Employees

The manner by which employers – and ultimately employees – may purchase coverage through the Exchange will be one of the most important policy decisions, and will likely determine the ultimate success of the Exchange in serving the employer market. Key policy decisions include participation requirements, contribution requirements, and the number and type of health plans from which employees may choose. Each is discussed briefly below.

Participation Requirements

Currently, health carriers that offer coverage in the small group market require a minimum percentage of employees to enroll in coverage as a pre-condition for selling group coverage. An employer with five or fewer employees is typically required to enroll all of his/her employees in the group's health plan, unless an employee is covered as a spouse or as a dependent under another employer's plan. For groups of six or more employees, the participation requirement is generally 75 percent. If an employer cannot meet these enrollment thresholds, the health carrier will not sell the policy to the group.

Contribution Requirements

Carriers also require employers to contribute a minimum amount of the monthly premium – generally 50 percent of the premium for single coverage – as a pre-condition for insuring a group. Employers unable or unwilling to contribute at least 50 percent of the premium are not allowed to purchase group insurance.

The participation and contribution requirements protect against adverse selection and the risk of bad debt. Adverse selection involves a situation in which an individual's demand for insurance, and level of coverage, is directly related to the individual's perceived need for insurance. Older and sicker individuals may be more prone to participate in the insurance plan or enroll in the most comprehensive coverage because they have a known health care need or perceive that they need insurance; while younger and healthier individuals may choose to go without coverage or opt for a more limited health policy based on their perceived need for coverage.

Because the carriers may not know the health status of the group's members, they are unable to adjust prices to account for this selection bias. By requiring all employees or a majority of employees to be covered by the group policy, the carriers can minimize the potential for adverse selection. The contribution requirement helps reduce the risk of bad debt.

Key policy decisions for the Exchange will be whether the participation and contribution requirements that currently apply to employers purchasing coverage outside of the Exchange will apply to employers that purchase coverage through the Exchange. The Exchange's group purchasing model, discussed below, may also influence policy decisions regarding the contribution and participation requirements.

Employer Purchasing Models – Options for the Exchange

The manners by which employers – and by extension their employees – purchase coverage through the SHOP Exchange will impact the extent to which the Exchange can effectively serve the group market. While there may be any number of purchasing models that one could develop, listed below are four options that Delaware may consider for its SHOP Exchange. These models are not necessarily mutually exclusive, in that the Exchange may choose to allow employers to select from two or more purchasing options.

One Carrier, One Plan

This model reflects the traditional way that employers, particularly small employers, purchase health insurance. The employer selects a carrier and a health plan, and his/her employees are offered one health plan. The Exchange could be used by the employer – aided, perhaps, by an agent or broker – to compare health plans, assess premium contribution options, and select a carrier and health plan for his/her employees.

Monthly Premiums for Single Coverage
Health Plan/Carrier	Carrier A	Carrier B	Carrier C	Carrier D
Platinum	$540	$531	$518	$554
Gold	$480	$472	$460	$492
Silver	$420	$413	$403	$431
Bronze	$360	$354	$345	$369

A composite rate could be developed for the group (i.e., a monthly premium for single coverage, employee plus spouse/child, and family coverage), and the employer's and employees' share of the premiums would be set for the entire group.

One Carrier, Multiple Plans

Under this purchasing model, the employer selects a health carrier and allows employees to enroll in any of the health plans offered by that carrier through the Exchange. The table below illustrates how this might be structured. A modification to this model could restrict employees' choice to a sub-set of the health plans offered by a carrier (e.g., Silver and Gold level only, or Silver and Bronze level only).

Monthly Premiums for Single Coverage
Health Plan/Carrier	Carrier A	Carrier B	Carrier C	Carrier D
Platinum	$540	$531	$518	$554
Gold	$480	$472	$460	$492
Silver	$420	$413	$403	$431
Bronze	$360	$354	$345	$369

Under this example, the employer "selects" Carrier B and his/her employees may choose from any of the health plans offered by that insurer. The employer could set its share of the premium contribution as a percentage of the cost of a specific plan (e.g., 70% of the cost of Carrier B's Silver plan), as a percentage of all plans' premiums, or as a flat dollar amount.

In the example below, if the employee selects the Silver plan, the employee would pay 30% of the cost. The employee would have the option of taking the employer's contribution – in this case $289 – and purchase a Gold or Platinum Plan, which would cost the employee more, or a Bronze Plan, which would cost the employee less, and pocket the difference in premium. The employer's share of the cost is fixed, while the employee's amount will vary depending on which plan the employee selects. The table below shows how this might work for an employee looking to enroll in single coverage.

Carrier B	Total Monthly Premium	Employer's Share of the Premium	Employee's Share of the Premium
Platinum	$531	$289	$242
Gold	$472	$289	$183
Silver	$413	$289	$124
Bronze	$354	$289	$65

Because employees may select from a number of health plans offered by a single carrier, it is likely that the group's premiums would need to switch from composite rating to list bill rating. Under composite rating, premiums are set on a group basis. The carrier establishes one premium for single coverage and one premium for family coverage, based on the composition of the entire group.

Under list bill rating, premiums are set for each employee that enrolls in coverage, based on the demographics of the individual employee. For example, a 25-year old employee would be charged less than a 55-year old employee. However, even under list bill rating, the Exchange's purchasing model could be structured to eliminate, or greatly reduce, any age-based differences in the employees' share of the premium by modifying the employer's contribution to reflect differences in premiums due to age.

All Carriers, One Plan Level

Under this purchasing model, the employer selects a plan level (i.e., Platinum, Gold, Silver, or Bronze) and allows his/her employees to select from any of the health carriers within a particular Level. The table below illustrates how this might be structured.

Monthly Premiums for Single Coverage
Health Plan/Carrier	Carrier A	Carrier B	Carrier C	Carrier D
Platinum	$540	$531	$518	$554
Gold	$480	$472	$460	$492
Silver	$420	$413	$403	$431
Bronze	$360	$354	$345	$369

Under this example, the employer selects the Silver Level plan and his/her employees may choose from any of the health carriers that offer a Silver Level plan offered through the Exchange. The employer could set its premium contribution as a percentage of the cost of a specific plan (e.g., 70% of the cost of Carrier B's Silver plan), as a percentage of all plans' premiums within the plan level, or provide a flat dollar amount that employees could then use to subsidize any of the plans offered on the Silver Level.

For example, if the employee selects Carrier B’s Silver plan, the employee would pay 30% of the cost. The employee would then have the option of taking the employer’s contribution – in this example, $289 – and purchase a Silver plan from any of the other carriers. The employer’s share of the cost is fixed, while the employee’s share of the premium will vary depending on which carrier the employee selects. The table below shows how this might work for an employee looking for single coverage.

Carriers’ Silver Level Plan	Total Monthly Premium	Employer’s Share of the Premium	Employee’s Share of the Premium
Carrier A	$420	$289	$131
Carrier B	$413	$289	$124
Carrier C	$403	$289	$113
Carrier D	$413	$289	$141

Because employees may select from a number of health carriers within a plan level, premiums would likely need to switch from composite rating to list bill rating, as discussed above.

All Carriers, All Plans

Under this purchasing model, employees would be allowed to select from any of the health plans offered by the health carriers participating in the Exchange. The employer’s share of the premium could vary based on the percentage of the premium (e.g., 70% of any plan’s premium), could be set based on the premium of a particular plan offered by a specific carrier (e.g., 70% of the Silver Level Plan offered by Carrier B), or the employer could provide employees with a flat dollar amount and allow them to apply the employer’s defined contribution to any health plan offered through the Exchange.

Monthly Premiums for Single Coverage
Health Plan/Carrier	Carrier A	Carrier B	Carrier C	Carrier D
Platinum	$540	$531	$518	$554
Gold	$480	$472	$460	$492
Silver	$420	$413	$403	$431
Bronze	$360	$354	$345	$369

As with the previous two purchasing models, because employees may select from any of the health carriers, premiums would likely need to be established on a list bill basis.

Each of these models brings with it implications for the Exchange’s attractiveness and sustainability, operational and administrative challenges, the potential for adverse selection, and ramifications for the broader commercial insurance market. Delaware will need to evaluate the advantages and disadvantages of each purchasing option, and determine which model may work best for Delaware's employers, employees, residents and insurers.

Premium Billing, Collection and Remittance

The need for the Exchange to administer premium billing, collection, and remittance on behalf of small employers purchasing coverage through the Exchange will be particularly crucial. Depending on how the SHOP Exchange structures its purchasing model, employees may be able to choose coverage from a number of health carriers. If the health plans are responsible for premium billing and collection from the business, an employer purchasing coverage through the Exchange would likely need to pay multiple health carriers for, and will need to establish contractual relationships with, the various health carriers selected by his/her employees.

From an employer's perspective, the prospect of paying multiple insurers will greatly diminish the attractiveness and value of purchasing coverage through the Exchange. In addition to receiving multiple invoices and issuing multiple checks for his/her employees' health coverage, by not centralizing the premium billing and other administrative functions, the employer would need to deal with various health carriers to handle mid-year changes in employment, changes in status for existing employees, and all of the other administrative tasks that are now handled through one health carrier or through a broker.

In light of those administrative challenges, the Exchange may be the appropriate entity to assume responsibility for premium billing, collection, and remittance to the carriers, as well as other mid-year administrative tasks, such as changes in enrollment, COBRA notification, etc. In addition, the Exchange will be responsible for administering the premium tax credits program for eligible small employers that employ low-wage workers.

Key Issues for Delaware

As discussed above, the State will need to address a number of issues as it goes about the task of setting up the SHOP Exchange, develops the administrative processes and procedures to offer insurance to employers, and works with health carriers to structure a market that works for Delawareans. Listed below are a few of the key questions that will need to be resolved over the course of the next two years.

- Should the State establish one or two Exchanges to serve the individual and small group market?
- Should the individual and small group market risk pools be combined or remain separate?
- What type of purchasing model will best meet the needs of employers, employees and insurers?

- Is there a market segment, particularly among small employers, that may be interested in offering employer-sponsored insurance but are unable to meet the minimum participation and/or contribution standards?
- Can the Exchange fill this gap and promote an alternative means by which employers can subsidize insurance on a defined contribution basis?
- If the participation and contribution requirements are modified, what might be the effect on the small group risk pool, and should these “groups” be included in the individual market instead of the small group market?
- What might be the effect on the broader small group market from the introduction of an Exchange and the availability of premium subsidies for individuals who are not offered employer-sponsored insurance?

Overview of ACA's Small Group Regulatory Requirements

The federal health care reform law will require Delaware to make a number of changes to its small group rating rules, and will restrict the number and types of rating factors used to set plan premiums in the small group market, as well as place limits on annual deductibles and require that certain benefits be covered by the health plans sold in the small group market.

For coverage effective January 2014, the federal law requires health plans to cover essential health benefits. While the specifics regarding what constitutes essential health benefits will be further defined by the federal Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS), the law² enumerates a number of services that must be covered by health plans, including:

- Ambulatory patient services
- Emergency services
- Hospitalization
- Maternity and newborn care
- Mental health and substance abuse services, including behavioral health treatment
- Prescription drugs
- Rehabilitative and habilitative services and devices
- Laboratory services
- Preventive and wellness services and chronic disease management
- Pediatric services, including oral and vision care

In addition to these federal requirements, Delaware has 32 mandated benefits and services that must be covered by commercial health plans. However, for coverage purchased through the Health Insurance Exchange, the federal law requires that the cost of mandated benefits that exceed essential health benefits must be paid for by the State.

Delaware will need to review carefully the essential health benefits, which are due to be released in the fall of 2011, and compare those requirements to the State's mandated benefits. A policy decision will then need to be made regarding whether the State will continue to require health plans to cover benefits and services above and beyond the essential health benefits; and, if so, how the State will pay for those benefits for the policies that are purchased through the Exchange.

Furthermore, in the small group market, annual deductibles – that is, out-of-pocket expenses that must be paid by the member for services before the health plan’s coverage begins – will be limited to $2,000 for single coverage and $4,000 for family coverage.

In addition to the rating rules and benefits changes that will take effect in January 2014, by January 2016, the small group market will include businesses with up to 100 employees. Currently, the Delaware small group market is defined as businesses with up to 50 employees.

Listed below are the major requirements that will take effect in 2014. These changes may affect the number of people covered in the small group market, the number of employers that offer employer-sponsored insurance, as well as the number of carriers offering small group coverage in Delaware.

Definition of Small Group	Up to 50 employees until 2016 (state option); after 2016, up to 100 employees
Guaranteed issue	Yes
Guaranteed renewal	Yes
Rating factors allowed	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Age -- 1:3 max ratio • Geography • Tobacco -- 1:1.5 (max) ratio • Family composition • Wellness program -- up to 30% premium discount
Annual deductible limits	$2,000 (single) $4,000 (family)
Benefits included in the plan	State mandates and “essential health benefits,” to be defined by the US Secretary of Health and Human Services
