

THE MALE VETERAN AND “WARRIOR MASCULINITY”

“The wounds we keep inside ourselves are just as important and need to be treated as equally as we treat those outwardly physical wounds,”
Army Col. Patricia Horoho, a registered nurse, told the Pentagon Channel. “We want to make sure we are treating the whole person.”

Dr Gary Brooks, a recognized expert on dealing with trauma, will lead a workshop that will present and evaluate necessary accommodations for challenges and prohibitions on help-seeking behaviors of male veterans.
