That which makes us good at and committed to this work is also that which makes it challenging.
We do this because we care, because we are naturally empathic, and because many of us have experienced trauma ourselves.
Many titles, similar concept

- Burnout
- Compassion Fatigue
- Secondary Traumatic Stress
- Vicarious Trauma
What is the emotional price of caring?

- The stress scores of palliative care workers are almost twice as high as those of newly widowed women and higher than patients newly diagnosed with breast cancer.

(Vachon, 1987)
In studies of social workers:

- 39% reported current symptoms of burnout and
- 75% reported experiencing burnout at some point in their career. (Brown, 2008)
- 73% of social workers have considered leaving their jobs (Maslach, 2003)
• Social workers have higher rates of burnout than other helping professionals such as occupational therapists (Brown, 2008)

• In a study of British social workers, 74% were experiencing high levels of anxiety (Lloyd et al., 2002)

• 62% of experience Child Protective Service workers scored high on a measure of emotional exhaustion. (Anderson, 2001)
In a study of substance abuse workers

- 82% reported high psychological stress
- 33% were experiencing emotional exhaustion
- 36% reported diminished feelings of personal accomplishment (Oyefeso et al., 2008)
We can be as traumatized as our clients.

In one study, 17.7% of caseworkers suffered from secondary traumatic stress, while only 15.2% of Vietnam Vets reported post-traumatic stress disorder (Kulka et al, 1990).
Vicarious Trauma

“Vicarious traumatization is the process through which the therapist’s inner experience is negatively transformed through empathic engagement with the client’s trauma material.”

(McCann & Pearlman, 1990)
Signs of Compassion Fatigue & Vicarious Trauma

• Hypervigilance
• Suspicion about people’s motives & behaviors
• Difficulty sleeping, nightmares
• Intrusive images
• Anxiety
• Numbness
• Inability to experience pleasure
• Excessive caregiving (on & off the job)
• Cynicism
• Feelings of shame about no longer feeling like the warm, compassionate & optimistic person caregiver once was
• Reactivation of own issues
• Anger & irritability often due to fatigue
• Reduced tolerance for what are perceived as others’ “petty problems”

• Depression

• Exhaustion

• Increased self-criticism

• Feel estranged from others
• Challenges to one’s cognitive schema’s (how one makes sense of the world)

• Shatters ability to believe the world is a safe, just, controllable, and meaningful place

• Carry the burden of the “terrible knowledge” about the underbelly of life

• Forces examination of life priorities (can be good but disruptive)
The Cost of Caring
Questionnaire
Check-off List
What contributes to Vicarious Trauma?

• Bearing witness to trauma (ex. Death of a child or a young parent, or death due to traumatic event)

• Powerlessness of the patient parallels caregiver’s powerlessness if they feel they need to “fix it”

• Childhood experience of parentification creates unrealistic expectations in caregiver
• Believing self-care is less important than the care we provide others

• A recognition that trauma is linked to a larger social/political power imbalances which are not easily remedied.
What contributes to burnout

• Working conditions (big caseloads, do more with less, excessive paperwork, low pay, excluded from administrative decisions, etc.)

• Patient contributions (multiple problems, economic limitations, hostile transference, suicide threats, fewer program options)

• Isolation (physical & psychic)
The Cost of Caring
Questionnaire
Questions 2 & 3
Addressing Compassion Fatigue & Vicarious Trauma

• Must reduce stress and transform despair that comes with having one’s view of the world shattered

• Normalize, don’t pathologize. Figley (95) suggests the best counselors are most at risk because they care.
The ABC’s Of Addressing Vicarious Trauma:

• Awareness (of own needs, limits, emotions & resources)

• Balance (of work & play; taking care of others & taking care of yourself)

• Connection (to oneself, others & to something larger)
• Develop cognitive schemas which recognize the miraculous standing next to the tragic
Human compassion is equal to human cruelty and .... It is up to each of us to tip the balance.

Alice Walker
• Ask for help when you need it

• Create an organizational climate that encourages self-care

• Make self-care a routine, not an infrequent occurrence
The Cost of Caring
Questionnaire
Final check off list
Strategies for Refueling

• Psychologically
  ▪ Journal writing
  ▪ Sharing your feelings
  ▪ Vent emotions in safe ways (throwing ice cubes, play sad music)
  ▪ Visualize a safe & nurturing place and visit it regularly
Safe Place
Visualization
Use affirmations to counter negative thinking:

I may not be perfect, but I’m perfectly fine.

My needs and feelings count too.

I will treat myself as kindly as I treat others.

I will respond to myself with compassion.
Circle of Caring
Exercise
Refueling

• Physically
  - Massage (simple or full body)
  - Ask for comforting touch
  - “Non-should” exercise (walking, playing)
  - Create healing/sacred space in your office & at home
  - Practice radical self-care
  - Create simple pleasures
Refueling

• Socially
  ▪ Make time for pleasing social activities
  ▪ Get out and try new things
  ▪ Ask a friend to “just listen” for 15 minutes
  ▪ Gather with “kindred spirit” (church, support groups, clubs & other organizations)
• Connect, Connect, Connect
• Get involved with social activism & community organizing
• Join a support group
• See if others at work would like to start a self-care support group
Refueling

• Spiritually

- In response to the 3 C’s (I didn’t cause it, I can’t change it, and I can’t control it), try the 3 P’s (Pause, Pray and Proceed

- Attend church or engage in a spiritual practice that is meaningful to you

- Create rituals that speak to you
- Walk in nature
- Do whatever brings you closer to something bigger than yourself
- Read inspirational materials
- Put inspirational quotes, pictures or images around you
Develop a self-care Plan for Yourself

Exercise
Other things that help

• Develop realistic expectations for self & employees

• If possible set aside some time in staff meetings to allow people to share their feelings

• Don’t expect quick fixes
• Share coping strategies

• Confirm the positive experiences and ways in which it work enriches your life
“So how do you sit with a shattered soul
Gently, with gracious and deep respect.
Patiently, for time stands still for the shattered, and the momentum of healing will be slow at first. With the tender strength that comes from an openness to your own deepest wounding, and to your own deepest healing.
Firmly, never wavering in the utmost conviction that evil is powerful, but there is a good that is more powerful still.
Stay connected to the goodness with all of your being....Give freely. Take in abundantly. Find your safety, your refuge, and go there as you need. Hear what you can, and be honest about the rest; be honest at all cost. Words won’t always come; sometimes there are no words in the face of such tragic evil. But in your willingness to be with them, they will hear you; from soul to soul they will hear that for which there are no words. (Steele, 1989)
Crystal Exercise
Sharing our suggestions and intentions.
Always remember:

If your compassion does not include yourself, it is incomplete.

- The Buddha